PROJECT UPDATE

West Bay Cane Beds: West of the Big Gap is all but gone. What's worse, there were ZERO Forster Tern nests located in the whole West Bay cane bed area. They have vacated the area. The pilot project of transplanting canes appears to have failed. We aren't sure what our options are going forward but focusing on the Poygan Breakwall.

Poygan Breakwall: We are awaiting the grant award for the next few segments of the Poygan Breakwall. We are shooting to have a design in hand by year end and installation of the next structures in 2018 or more likely 2019. The completed first phase has not shown any signs of sinking and looks to be a good starting point. While birds are resting on the wall, they are not nesting on it. Future designs will likely be lower in the water to deter birds.

In-lake Fish Reefs: There are now 3 fish reefs complete in the area of the one placed last year. We are still shooting for more – and likely to be done when we do the other sections of the Poygan Breakwall – stay tuned.
